Copenhagen Declaration on Ukraine, 11 August 2022

The defense ministers and representatives of Ukraine, the United Kingdom, Denmark and key allies and partners met today in Copenhagen to discuss how to enhance and sustain longer-term military support to Ukraine in light of Russia's continued brutal and unprovoked attack on Ukraine.

They condemned Russia's brutality and indiscriminate killing of Ukrainian civilians in the strongest way possible, and expressed their full support to Ukraine.

They agreed on the importance of continued and sustained military assistance to Ukraine in its fight for security and freedom.

They discussed specific projects and ways to

- facilitate continued long-term funding
- enhance armaments production, including of artillery and ammunition,
- develop and strengthen training of Ukrainian soldiers, and
- assist Ukraine's efforts within demining in the best possible way.

They agreed to continue and enhance their funding of military assistance to Ukraine within these four priority areas based on national decisions and procedures.

They agreed to meet virtually again in September in order to ensure continued progress.

They emphasized the important efforts made by the US-led Ukraine Defense Contact Group and the International Donor Coordination Center (IDCC) and committed to continue cooperation in that key framework and to intensify the coordination of support with the European Union and bilateral frameworks.
